

My parents and I decided to go to Belfast this summer. Being fascinated by the history of this ship and the romantic movie with Leonardo Di Caprio and Kate Winslet, I knew that I must visit the Titanic Museum.

Titanic Museum is one of Belfast's most famous and popular attractions and the opinions I found on the internet aroused my interest even more. Belfast is the city where the ship was originally created in 1912. But is the museum worth visiting if you are not a big fan of Titanic? What were my impressions of the tour?

If you want to enter the museum, you have to wait in a long line, so I recommend buying a ticket online and skip the line. Museum focuses on the historical context, building and re-discovery of the Titanic. You can also combine sightseeing with entertainment through the possibility of playing various games. It is a self-guided tour so visitors can explore at their own pace. Audio guides are available in different languages which is very helpful. It is worth pointing out that the staff was extremely helpful and enthusiastic which made sightseeing even more enjoyable.

The whole experience made me feel moved and delighted. It is a great place to spend free time for both adults and children. The whole tour took me two and a half hours. Me and my parents were pleasantly surprised with how interesting the museum was and this visit even exceeded our expectations. I highly recommend a visit to the museum. Definitely I will never forget this experience.

When leaving the museum I remembered the following words from the movie „Titanic" - „I figure life's a gift and I don't intend on wasting it. You don't know what hand you're gonna get dealt next. You learn to take life as it comes at you... to make each day count." These words, visiting the museum and the tragic history of Titanic made me reflect that our life is an adventure where each day can be a new, beautiful deal. ..beautiful experience.
