

MIEJSCE I

TOPIC: The girl was freezing cold.

It was Christmas but she was lost in the middle of the forest.

The girl was freezing cold. It was Christmas, but she was lost in the middle of a forest. The place she was supposed to find, should be right there, yet there was nothing more than rocks and trees. Maybe she went the wrong way or the old map she was holding in her cold hands was upside down? Or maybe the map was only made as a game for children to play? The last option was the most likely, but the girl couldn't believe that her grandfather gave her as a heritage something so important, as he stated, only a map for kids' game.

Before he died he gave her a statement that the map would take her to a place full of mysteries and it was supposed to hide the truth about Christmas. The girl knew she had to find the place. She was the only one from her family who believed her grandfather and she definitely didn't want to disappoint him. She squeezed the map in her hands and rushed forward. She desperately looked for any hints in the forest, but she couldn't find anything.

Then something flashed before her eyes. She turned around and saw a reindeer. It had beautiful grey fur and a big red nose. The girl knew it wasn't a coincidence. The reindeer came closer, so the girl could touch his head. It had a collar with "Rudolph" written on it. When she looked closer she saw a saddle on his back. She jumped on it and Rudolph took her to the same place where she lost her way. Rudolph came near a big rock and waited patiently. The girl hopped off the saddle and came closer to take a look. Her name was scribbled on a huge rock. Near the name there was attached a really small pebble. It didn't look as if it was a part of a bigger rock. When she touched it she realized it was a button. Shortly after the rock showed a tunnel inside it. Rudolph went in and waited for the girl to come along. She went inside after the reindeer not knowing that this tunnel was about to take her to a magic place where all the truth her grandpa wanted her to find out was hidden along with the magic factory where the wishes of children all over the world would come true.
